“My final words are for you and for all the members of the Workers’ Party. I have given whatever I had to give for the Party, for the people of Ireland, and for a better world.

Others have given more, much more. Other comrades have given their lives. But each one gives what they can and all work in a spirit of comradeship. That’s what wins all struggles and I must thank each one of you, and all the members of the Party now and over many years for the great help and support and loyalty they have given me, and for their belief in me over the years.”

Tomás Mac Giolla
Farewell Presidential Address
RDS, Dublin
Saturday 16 April 1988

“It is not a field of a few acres of ground, but a cause, that we are defending, and whether we defeat the enemy in one battle, or by degrees, the consequences will be the same.”

Thomas Paine
The American Crisis
